

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES PUT FINISHING TOUCHES TO THEIR WHIRLWIND CAMPAIGN

After Today's Speeches
Hughes and Wilson Will Rest Up.

TELLING BLOWS AT THE WINDUP

Roosevelt, Hughes and Knox Address
Clearing Multitudes in Summing
Up the Case Against Administration;
New York Is the Storm Center.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Candidates for the Presidency and prominent campaign orators in general will make their last spoken appeals for votes today. Some time around midnight when the last cheer has died away, the last red fire has burned out and the last parade has gone home, the national campaign will be virtually over.

Charles E. Hughes ended his political travels yesterday, but the last day of his campaign is one of the hardest. He makes five speeches here this afternoon and will deliver his final address at a rally in Madison Square Garden which will close the greatest Republican rally of the campaign in New York City.

President Wilson at Long Branch will make his last speech before an audience from his home state. Every Democratic county organization in New Jersey will send delegates to Shadow Lawn.

Both candidates will spend the two days that intervene before election quietly, the President at Shadow Lawn, and Mr. Hughes at the hotel where he has made his New York headquarters since he left Washington. They will receive the returns at those places.

J. Frank Hanly, the Prohibition Presidential candidate, will reach his home in Indianapolis tonight after a final day of speechmaking through Indiana. Since September 8 he has traveled nearly 20,000 miles through 21 states. The Socialist candidate, Allen L. Benson, who has made campaign speeches in almost every part of the country is today in Kansas City, Mo.

Mr. Hughes, the Republican candidate, holds the record for campaign journeys. When he reached New York yesterday he had made four distance trips since August have carried him through 33 states and a distance of about 25,000 miles. Most of the President's trips were as long as those of his rival and most of them were made to some specific point to deliver one principal address.

President Wilson's campaign has had the assistance of his cabinet members and of Vice President Marshall, while Mr. Hughes enjoyed the unique distinction of having speeches made for him by two former occupants of the White House, William H. Taft and Theodore Roosevelt. Colonel Roosevelt made his last speech here last night.

The increased number of states in which women have votes has given women a greater part in this campaign than ever before. The most extensive campaign trip ever undertaken by a female political worker ended here last night when a special train brought back the women who have been traveling through the country to win votes for Mr. Hughes. They have journeyed 17,700 miles and addressed 241 meetings in 23 states.

ROOSEVELT SUMS UP.

A NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Theodore Roosevelt, speaking at a mass meeting in Cooper Union here last night, denounced the policies of the Wilson administration and urged his audience to "put in the presidential chair the clean and upright justice of the Supreme Court, the fearless former governor of New York, whose whole public record has been that of a man straightforward in his thought, and courageous in his action, who cannot be controlled to do what is wrong and who will do what is right no matter what influences may be brought against him."

The former President broke away from his speech which he had prepared in advance, to say what he thought of the so-called "hyphenates." He declared that although Washington and Lincoln were of English blood, they were both Americans through and through.

"In the face of the world he has covered this nation's face with shame as with a garment," was one of the stinging denunciations concerning President Wilson made by Roosevelt.

"There can be no greater mistake for a free nation than to find itself under incapable leadership when confronted by a great crisis. This is exactly the case when the crisis is not merely one in the history of this to some terrible world catastrophe—such a catastrophe as at this moment overshadows civilization. The times have needed a Washington or a Lincoln. Unfortunately we have been granted only another Buchanan."

"The appeal is made on behalf of Mr. Wilson that we should not change horses in crossing a stream. The worth of such an appeal is not obvious when the horse, whenever he comes to a stream, first pretends he is going to jump it, then refuses to enter it, and when he has reached the middle, alternately moves feebly forward and feebly backward, and occasionally lies down. We had just entered the greatest crisis in our history when we swapped horses by exchanging Buchanan for Lincoln; and if we had not made the exchange we would never have crossed the stream at all. The future now to change Mr. Wilson for Mr. Hughes would be almost as damaging."

"I have been assailed because I have criticized Mr. Wilson. I have not said one thing of him that was not absolutely accurate and truthful. I have criticized him because I believe he has dragged in the dust what was most sacred in our past, and has jeopardized the most vital hopes of our future. I have never spoken of him as strongly as Abraham Lincoln in his day spoke of Buchanan and Pierce when they were Presidents of the United States. I speak of him at all, only because I have felt that in this great world crisis he has played a more evil part than Buchanan and Pierce ever played in the years that led up to and saw the opening of the Civil War."

HUGHES ENDS TOUR.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Charles E. Hughes wound up his 28,000-mile Presidential campaign tour with 16 strenuous hours of campaigning yesterday, down the Hudson River Valley and in Brooklyn. He delivered nine speeches. Tonight a big rally at Madison Square Garden will follow a whirlwind day of more speaking in New York City.

On his trip down the Hudson River Valley, Mr. Hughes made the tariff one of the chief themes of his speeches. At his four meetings here last night, he spoke chiefly on Americanism.

"Let me say to you," he told an audience in Brooklyn, the last he addressed last night, "that if I am elected President, as I expect to be—A man in the gallery yelled: 'You will be.'"

"If I am elected President," Mr. Hughes continued, "we shall have an American administration with exclusively American policies, without any defection to serve any other interest."

Conditions which industry in the United States will face at the close of the war were carefully considered for "serious consideration by every student of our affairs."

"We want to look out to the future, not to the past," he declared to one audience, "because there are quite a number of things that we must carefully consider. The Underwood tariff, Mr. Hughes said, would not meet the situation as a measure of protection to American industry."

KNOX FOR "OPEN DOOR."

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4.—The Academy of Music was the scene of a grand rally of reunited Republicans last night. The principal speaker was former Secretary of State Philander C. Knox, Congressman of Adm. Bede of Minnesota and Congressman Graham and Vice of Philadelphia, and William Draper Lewis, Progressive nominee for governor of Pennsylvania, also delivered speeches. The address was delivered by Mr. Knox was undoubtedly the most forceful, the most eloquent of the campaign. When he declared that when the Democratic administration failed to grasp the opportunity of extending this nation's trade with China, when under the Wilson policies the "open door" in China was almost shut, America lost an opportunity of building up a trade alliance which would have lasted for centuries and which possibly would have averted the war of nations, the audience shouted and cheered again.

SAYS HUGHES WILL WIN.

"It will be a pretty close contest for the Presidency," said Cyrus H. K. Curtis, the Philadelphia editor and publisher, in Pittsburg last night, "but I believe Hughes will win. I have just come from a trip through the Northwest and the Middle West, where I found Hughes sentiment to be very strong."

"To my mind, the thinking class of the laboring people will not be misled by any alluring promises. They know that the wage question should be settled outside the halls of Congress, realizing that if Congress has the power to shorten the hours of the working day and raise the wages of the employed, it has an equal right to lengthen the hours of the working day and lower wages at will."

Mr. Curtis said he is not taking a very active part in politics, but is anxious for Hughes to win. "I voted for Wilson four years ago," he said, "and it was not very long before I was sorry I did so. His policies have been directly opposed to my way of thinking; that is, so far as he has policies. The trouble with him, I think, is that he has few definite policies, or if he does not intend to them long enough for one to get a clear idea of what their import is. If the people of this country cannot grasp Mr. Wilson's trend, how could it be expected that the people of foreign nations understand clearly what his policies are?"

Some Thunder.
Thunder and lightning accompanied the hard shower of this morning.

THE UNDERWOOD TARIFF LAW

The Underwood Tariff law went into effect October 4, 1913, ten months before the European war began.

What happened? Business bankrupt, enterprise paralyzed, capital hiding, labor seeking employment, soup houses and bread lines established. Four million workers were out of employment or on short time. Imports from Europe increased enormously and our exports decreased. Gold left the country to settle our debts to Europe. A Democratic Stamp Tax had to be levied to meet ordinary expenses of the Government. Gross earnings of railroads decreased forty-four million dollars. Nearly two hundred and fifty thousand men were laid off by the railroads up to July, nine months after the Underwood bill became law. The Clafin failure for $34,000,000 occurred. Bankruptcies were frequent.

On May 29, 1914, a deputation of business men representing nearly a billion dollars of manufacturing interests, employing hundreds of thousands of workmen, told the President at the White House that the country must speedily have relief.

Mr. Wilson replied that the situation was, "merely psychological."

The European war began. European exporters ceased to send their products to the United States and became our greatest customers, principally in munitions and war supplies. A period of ephemeral prosperity ensued. Democratic leaders seized on this Temporary Prosperity as an explanation of the disasters brought on by the Underwood Low Tariff law and have ever since been shouting "Prosperity."

What will happen after the European war ends? Unless there is a Protective Tariff European producers will again dump their surplus goods into the United States and exactly the same conditions will prevail as under the first ten months of the Underwood Low Tariff law. Labor will be out of employment. Business will suffer.

Unless a Republican President and a Republican House and Senate are elected next Tuesday, pledged to a Tariff system for Protection of American Labor and Industries, a financial catastrophe will occur.

The remedy for this approaching disaster is plain.

Vote the Republican ticket next Tuesday!

BROWNSVILLE HAS ROUSING MEETING; RIVER IS ENTHUSED

Republican Rally Affords
Opportunity for a Big Demonstration.

GOOD SPEAKERS ON PROGRAM

E. Y. Babcock of Pittsburg, Former Congressman Cooper and Congressman Hopwood Make Addresses; Campaign Comes to a Close Tonight.

Brownsville is still the same old Republican stronghold and will roll up its usual big vote for Hughes and the entire party ticket next Tuesday, judging from the great Republican demonstration there last night. A parade of 3,000 voters was followed by an enthusiastic meeting in the Arcade Theatre, at which Congressman R. E. Babcock of Pittsburg and former Congressman A. P. Cooper of Uvalde made addresses.

The rally was the best ever held in Brownsville. There was real undiluted Republican enthusiasm, the kind that is going to make many straight Republican votes next Tuesday. Congressman Hopwood was given a wonderful ovation. He was justly cheered for several minutes when he rose to speak.

Mr. Babcock told of the broken promises of Democracy, their failure to reduce the cost of living, their promises of efficiency and economy followed by four years of wildest extravagance and mismanagement, and their total lack of leadership. Congressman Hopwood retorted his arguments for a protective tariff and urging the election of Hughes and a Republican Congress.

Former Congressman Cooper gave a forceful address in which he showed that much more than half of all that is being produced in the United States now is going to the European nations now at war. He backed these statements up with official statistics. There will be a parade before the speechmaking at Point Marion. Congressman R. F. Hopwood, former Congressman A. F. Cooper, L. B. Brownfield, H. K. MacQuarrie and A. E. Jones will make addresses.

ADAMSON LAW INVALID

Railroad Attorneys Say It Can't Be Enforced, Hupley Declares.

By Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—E. P. Ripley, president of the Atchafalaya, Tonopah and Santa Fe railroad, before the City Club yesterday, said legal talent of railroads is still in a quandary as to what the roads should do with regard to the Adamson law.

"The best legal opinion is to the effect that it cannot be constructed to be a legal and binding statute," said Mr. Ripley. "If the railroads tried to enforce it as it reads there would be a strike, because it would seriously reduce the earnings of a large part of the highest paid men."

Get 40 Rabbits.
J. L. Reese and K. E. Nicholson returned last night from two and a half day hunting trip to Draketon, near Confluence, bringing with them 40 rabbits and four pheasants.

CORNERSTONE LAID 30 YEARS AGO IS FOUND INTACT

Box in Wall of Old Lutheran Church Contains Interesting Documents.

PASTOR ASKS FOR CONTENTS

Rev. Burgess Requests That the Box Be Given to Him Because of the Value of the Records It Contains; Stone Was Laid on June 6, 1886.

After 30 years' repose in the foundation walls of the old Lutheran Church on Apple street, the cornerstone was taken out yesterday by workmen engaged in raising the building. The box was placed in the cavity of the stone on Sunday, June 6, 1886. Rev. E. B. Burgess, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, has asked that the contents of the box be given to him to be retained as mementoes.

The box today was still in the possession of J. M. Grey and William Dull, who purchased the church from the Pennsylvania railroad some months ago and razed it for the construction material.

The box contains a lot of interesting papers, church records and other literature which the congregation of those days wished to preserve. The constitution of the church, a copy of church, a copy of the application to the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension, and the invitation to the cornerstone laying with the program and names of officiating ministers lay side by side with copies of The Courier and The Monitor, Connellsville's newspapers of that period. Copies of current issues of The Missionary Journal, Sunday School Record, Luther's Memorial tract, Lutheran Year Book, Book of Worship, The Holy Bible, Luther's Catechism, Lutheran Observer Augsburg Teacher, the roll of members, list of subscribers to the building fund and the names of officials of the state and nation at that time were also placed in the box when it was put in the stone.

The list of subscribers is written in long hand and opposite each is the amount subscribed toward the building fund. The names of Governor Cleveland, President of the United States, Robert E. Patterson, governor of Pennsylvania, and C. E. Doyle, congressman from this district, were inscribed and placed inside the stone.

The corner stone was placed at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of Sunday, June 6, 1886 with impressive ceremonies. All of the church-going people of the town participated. Rev. L. L. Seiber, the pastor at that time, had charge of the ceremonies. Special services were also conducted in the Baptist Church morning and evening by the Lutheran congregation. Rev. W. C. Crier of Altoona preached the sermon.

Of the 36 charter members of the church who helped build the Apple street church and were active in the corner stone laying, 17 are still living. They are Mrs. Mary Atkinson, Mrs. Mary Slick, Mrs. John Percy, Mrs. John Guller, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Formwalt, Miss Kaile Silber, Mrs. Mollie Cunningham, Mrs. Josephine Yates, Mrs. Louise Bailey, Mrs. Mary Miller, Mrs. Margaret Schmidt, Mrs. Sarah Marietta, Mrs. Carrie Marietta, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Leiberger and Mrs. Jennie Hjeltnan.

SHIPS COLLIDE; 300 MAY BE DEAD

Only One Survivor is Reported From Two Vessels Which Crash in the Irish Sea.

By Associated Press.
LONDON, Nov. 4.—The London & Northwestern railway steamship Connemara, bound from Greenore to Holyhead with passengers, has collided with another vessel and is feared the death toll is about 300.

The Connemara collided with the steamship Retriever in the Irish channel last night. Both vessels were sunk.

So far as is known there is only one survivor from both ships. The railway company says it is unable to state whether any Americans were aboard these vessels. They seldom carry saloon passengers.

The marine superintendent of the London & Northwestern railway said that so far as he knew there were only 50 passengers on the Connemara. Her crew numbered 31. The Connemara was a steamer of 1,100 tons gross and was 272 feet long. The Retriever was 110 feet long and of 775 tons gross.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—A Lloyd's dispatch from Belfast says the collision occurred off Carrlingford Lough, an inlet on the Irish coast between the counties of Down and Louth. The Retriever was inward bound.

A few bodies have been washed ashore on the County Down coast. The dispatch says it is feared 300 lives have been lost.

SEEKS A FRANCHISE.

West Penn Again Wants Permission to Enter South Connellsville.

At a meeting of the South Connellsville council on Thursday night, an ordinance granting to the West Penn Electric Company perpetual use of the streets and sidewalks of the borough for the pole lines of the company for supplying current, was introduced. It was referred to a committee composed of W. S. Trevitt, W. R. Wadsworth and Sherman Weaver for a report. They will meet with Solicitor F. E. Younkman next Thursday night.

The West Penn has never been able to secure a franchise in South Connellsville, previous councils having been opposed to granting perpetual rights. The last council that considered the proposition was disinclined to consider longer than 10 years.

D. J. Shaffer of Pittsburgh represented the West Penn at the meeting.

The committee in charge consists of D. T. Hiersman, J. P. Smythe and J. A. LaRue.

TURKEYS ARE PLENTIFUL

Foxy Farmers, However, Refuse to Quote Any Prices.

Turkeys are reported to be exceptionally plentiful in the country districts, but there is no assurance that the consuming public will benefit. This year an unusual situation has developed, in that the farmers are sitting tight for top-notch prices. They refuse to quote prices to anyone who endeavors to engage birds for the holidays.

It is generally agreed that there are plenty of turkeys, but there is much guessing as to price. It has been predicted that by Thanksgiving turkeys may bring 50 cents a pound, dressed, but it will not be because there is a scarcity of them.

FIRE AT GARAGE PROVES SAFETY OF GASOLINE TANKS

Blaze in Pump of Hyatt & Marsh is Not Accompanied by Serious Results.

FIRE IS QUITE IS SPECTACULAR

Sheet of Flame Illuminates Entire West Side; Damage is But Slight and Cause of Fire is Uncertain; Witnesses of Blaze Much Alarmed.

A fire in the gasoline pump at the Hyatt & Marsh garage last night served to prove, according to automobile men, that underground tanks for gasoline are perfectly safe.

"If the tank system were dangerous at all, as many people seem to think," said J. L. Hyatt, one of the proprietors of the garage, his morning, "last night's fire would have been the worst kind of a blaze, and would have been combined with an explosion. There was every opportunity for the fire to develop into a serious conflagration, but because of the airtight construction of the tank, the blaze could not spread."

It was the gasoline in the pump which ignited in some unknown manner. A sheet of flame at least 30 feet high shot up instantly and illuminated the entire West Side. Mr. Hyatt, feeling sure that there would be no serious attempt to put out the fire with a hand extinguisher, but failing in this, he called the fire department, and two streams of chemicals playing on the pump soon drowned out the blaze. The damage was slight, the loss amounting to only a few dollars.

The cause of the fire is uncertain. Five gallons of gasoline had been pumped up ready for consumption when an employee of the garage noticed that the glass in the pump had cracked and the liquid was running down the sides of the stand. He entered the building to call Mr. Hyatt's attention to this leak, but before the manager could get out to the pump, the flames, and shot up.

Mr. Hyatt is of the opinion that a lighted cigarette or cigar was thrown on the pavement of the garage, and that the leaking gasoline came in contact with this smoldering stump. Fire Chief W. E. DeBolt is rather inclined to the belief that something went wrong with the electrical connections, lighting a bulb which is at the top of the pump.

The fire department, which responded to the call with the old truck, had a large water hose ready for service. It was laid and attached to a plug before Chief DeBolt saw that it would not be needed. The firemen thought at first, as did many other people throughout the city, that the entire garage was aflame.

The fire threw West Main street residents and passersby into alarm, as is evidenced by the fact that one young man, crying, "There she goes," set off down Second street as fast as his legs could carry him. He fully expected a huge explosion. As a matter of fact, there was no explosion, nor even any noise, except for a popping sound when the glass in the pump cracked and was shattered.

Garage men are pleased with the outcome of the fire. Remembering the excitement caused and the opposition raised when an underground tank was placed at a Pittsburg street garage, they point with triumph to the occurrence last night as a vindication of their views.

C. Roy Hetzel's Pharmacy Will Soon Be Ready for Business.

C. Roy Hetzel's new pharmacy in the Woolworth Building will open Monday. Owing to the funeral of Frank Huston, the city's oldest druggist for whom Mr. Hetzel was manager for about 11 years, the new store did not throw open its doors today, as originally intended.

The new store is one of the most attractive in the county. Double windows make a far more attractive front than heretofore. A feature of the fixtures is the new frosted bowl lighting system, an exclusive product of the Ripley Glass plant at South Connelville.

Earl K. Wynn will be assistant to Mr. Hetzel in the new store.

FOREIGNER ENJOYS LOW PRICES WHILE U. S. PAYS THE BILL

Foodstuffs Sent Abroad at Figures far Lower Than at Home.

CONSUMERS FACE BLUE WINTER

Those Not Participating in War Profits and War Wages Will Find It Hard to Make Ends Meet; Demagogue "Prosperity" is for Few Only.

Special to The Courier.

WASHINGTON, November 4.—We are shipping foodstuffs and coal or than those quoted at home. The American people who are not participating in war wages and war profits are about to face a winter with the cost of living higher than ever before in our history. Meanwhile the Democrats, who came into power on the promise to reduce the cost of living, are making a prosperity appeal to the factory workers and to the farmers of the European armies based on the false plea that Woodrow Wilson has brought about that prosperity which he kept us out of war with which we had no concern, but which makes possible the unstable prosperity which we now possess.

The official figures of the Department of Commerce, which have hitherto been made public, show that the prices which our people have to pay for foodstuffs produced in this country, compared with the prices at which these same articles are shipped to our customers abroad, are outrageously high, and that a large portion of the American public has to foot the prosperity bill.

Flour has gone to $12 a barrel and is slated for $14. Bread has increased to six cents a loaf. During the first eight months of 1915 we exported, mainly to the belligerents, 10,315,000 barrels of flour, the average export price being $5.50 per barrel. During the first eight months of the present year we exported 10,358,000 barrels of flour at an average export price of $5.50 per barrel. Europe pays a reduced price of 90 cents, we pay an increase of $6.00. We exported during the 1915 period 141,000,000 bushels of wheat, average export price $1.46 per bushel; during the 1916 period we exported a little over 100,000,000 bushels, average export price $1.31, a falling off of 41,000,000 bushels in exports, and of 14¢ in cost to our foreign purchasers. But wheat hovers around $2.00 here.

We exported 1,000,000 less bushels of corn during the 1916 period than during the 1915 period, the export bushel price advancing from 81 to 84 cents; it has advanced 40 and 43 cents here. Rice exports increased 2,000,000 bushels, the export price per bushel decreased 21 cents to our foreign customers, while the people of this country have to pay 40 cents more per bushel. Figures on oatmeal remained about the same for the foreigner, but we now pay more.

The South sold 101,000,000 pounds of rice to the foreigner during the 1915 period, at 4.1 cents, which is just what 45,000,000 pounds if it exported for during 1916 period. We sold 10,000,000 dozen eggs to the foreigners during the first eight months of 1916 for 21.6 cents a dozen, and 25,000,000 dozen for the 1915 period at 23 cents a dozen, and a purchaser of a dozen eggs in this country goes home under a heavy guard.

Nearly 190,000,000 pounds of fresh beef went abroad during the 1915 period at an export price of 12.9 cents, and 132,000,000 pounds for the 1916 period at 12.4 cents. Beef went up, so we of the United States turned to fresh pork. The export pound price of fresh pork was reduced to the foreigners, but here "pork chops is white man's meat" now, and he has got to have the price.

Butter exports to our foreign customers fell off nearly 50 per cent, comparing the two periods the price advanced from 25 to 27.4 cents per pound. In the United States also is rapidly becoming more popular. Condensed milk exports jumped from 35,000,000 to 154,000,000 pounds, and the price advanced from 7.8 to 8 cents to the foreigner. How does the farmer or the consumer fare here?

We sent about 1,000,000 bushels of beans abroad during the 1915 period, at 39 cents, and 1,280,000 for the 1916 period at 47 cents. Beans here have advanced 50 per cent and every Saturday is a day of mourning in Boston. The only large advance in export price to our foreign customers is in potatoes—from 82 cents to $1.12, and they are two dollars here.

Have Good Luck.

RALLY DAY AT THE JACOBS CREEK M. E. SCHOOL A SUCCESS

Delightful Wonther Helps Bring Out a Large Attendance.

HONOR CLASS IN ATTENDANCE

All Those Who Helped Build the Present Church Took Part; Large Percentage of Sunday School Members Are in Attendance; Big Gain Shown.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTSBURGH, Nov. 4.—The rally day of the Jacobs Creek Methodist Episcopal Sunday school was an unusually successful one. A perfect autumn day brought people from many miles around this historic church to enjoy the special features of the program. The singing of the old choruses was well done with enthusiasm. The Bible lesson for the day was given by the adult superintendent, Frank Chalm. In the form of a story illustrated on the blackboard, James L. Reynolds, teacher of the men's class of the Scottish Methodist Episcopal Sunday school, offered the prayer.

The honor class of the day was made up of all those who took part in the building of the present church, and who had some recollection of the old log church. It was a good lesson for the younger generation to look into the faces of these friends of the church who came to spend together an hour of looking backward.

For the encouragement of regular attendance at the preaching service a special record of the past year has been kept and the persons making the highest number of points were honored with a gift. The record is kept by giving 20 points for Sunday school attendance at the preaching service. Reynolds, G. W. Porter, John Riley, Avis Slaughter, Harland Dettler, Roy Magz, Pearl Riley, Mrs. Sue Riley, Paul Koser, Frances McClellan, Mrs. James B. Fretts.

On the basis of this year's record it is shown that 87 per cent of the Sunday school attendance were in at last year's record gave 32 1/2 per cent the gain shown is commendable. The percentage of those making offerings was 96 1/2 and 99 1-7 per cent came on time.

The third honor class was those who made special records for Sunday school attendance: Marie McClellan, Mary Gorman, Dessie Porter, Gladys Reagan, Avis Slaughter, Amy Porter, William Collins, Irene Chalm, Albert Bluch, Arthur McClellan, Mona Chalm, Rupert Blackie, Mrs. Frank Chalm, Ralph McClellan, Grace Ware, Pearl Riley, John Blackie, Harland Dettler, Frank Chalm, James L. Reynolds, G. W. Porter, John Riley, Avis Slaughter, Harland Dettler, Roy Magz, Pearl Riley, Mrs. Sue Riley, Paul Koser, Frances McClellan, Mrs. James B. Fretts.

This is a total of 49 as to 32 on the same standard last year. William Thompson of Uniontown praised the former honor roll class, and Mr. Clark, also of Uniontown, addressed this year's class. Each of the honor members was given a small book marked with "Honor, 1916," printed on it. These were in gold and white, the colors of the Teacher Training Class.

The promotions in the elementary department were given recognition and each of the children was given a beautiful certificate. From the Cradle Roll to Beginners—Paul Edwin Storer, Ralph John Koser, Gladys Reagan, Fannie Ruth Blackie, Beginners to Primary—Paul Koser, Dorothy Taylor, Carl Ruch and Robert Singer, Primary to Junior—Martha Brown, Donald Otonburg and Evelyn Taylor, Junior to Intermediate—Earl Tedrow, Ivan Porter, Gladys Reagan, Myrl Wright, Clara Leichter, Margaret, Margaret, Frances Melgar, Ella Ruch, Beulah Fretts, Beulah Baker, Araminta Sturtz, Ruth Ritchie, Lottie Fletcher, Alvarena Marsh, Rose Grossan, Pearl Buttermore.

The normal training graduates of the year were presented diplomas by Dr. J. J. Hill, district superintendent.

of the McKeesport district of the Pittsburgh conference. The graduates were: Alfred C. Stoner, Sue Riley, Dessie Porter, Mrs. J. B. Fretts, Grace Ware, Marie McClellan and Pearl Riley.

The 1916 song, "Launch Out," was sung by Jacob Koser. The 1916 class composed of Cella Porter, Goldie Ware, Jessie Tedrow, and Avis Slaughter, and the 1912 class made up of Evangelist A. B. Taylor, Jacob Koser, Mary Gorman, Charles Chalm, Leonard Chalm and Amy Jane Porter sang "As a Volunteer" as each year's class unveiled a pennant in gold and white bearing the class year.

The following persons were also given honorable mention for passing examination on "Soul Winning" and received a silver seal for their teacher training diploma: Cella Porter, Alice Howells, Dessie Porter, Avis Slaughter, Marie McClellan, Grace Ware, Amy Porter and Goldie Ware, and for "teaching principles" a red seal to Marie McClellan, Grace Ware, Amy Porter and Goldie Ware.

The splendid reading of a mission story by Miss Eva Rittenhouse of the East Huntingdon Township High School, was greatly appreciated. The officers and teachers of the Sunday school were then installed by the pastor, Rev. William Hamilton, and Dr. J. J. Hill then administered the communion.

M'BRIDE IS BACK

Irrepressible One Pays a Brief Visit to His Home Town.

Charles E. McBride, the irrepressible violinist, blew into town yesterday, after having spent some time on a show boat floating down the Monongahela river. He was greeted by a number of friends, who expressed regret when told that this was only a short visit. The music master will leave for Brownsville tonight, where for a time he will delight audiences at a moving picture palace by bringing forth sweet melodies from his old Stradivarius. Later he will move on to Steubenville.

Asked about the pleasures of show-boating, the irrepressible one indicated that the trip had not been so lovely as he had expected. "I did not care for my associates," he said. "Years ago when I ran for Congress I became used to associating with doctors, lawyers, judges, and so on. Now I can not get used to low comedians."

"Make a note of it that I am here," he told a reporter, as he stepped into a West Side hotel to see a friend, "for there are many people in Connellsville who know and admire me, and who will be glad to know of my return."

MOVING PICTURE FIRMS REORGANIZE AND CONSOLIDATE

Unsettled Condition of Play Industry Somewhat Relieved.

TRIANGLE HAS NEW PLANS

Big Organization Had Been Threatened With Disintegration; Clara Kimball Young Says Sub-titles Must Be Eliminated; Gossip of the Players

Important happenings in the past month served to relieve somewhat the unsettled condition of the play industry. Chief of these occurrences was a reorganization of Triangle, which had been threatened with disintegration. Under the new arrangement, Griffith, Ince and Sennott will continue producing for the three-sided concern, but it will be possible for exhibitors who do not subscribe to the regular program to secure Keystone comedies. Another important event was the consolidation of Morosco-Palms with the Famous Players-Lasky, this placing all of the companies, which release through Paramount in one organization.

"That the so-called 'silent drama' will never attain its highest form of expression until all wording matter is eliminated from the screen is the belief of Clara Kimball Young, whose most recent production, 'The Common Law,' set a record for the lowest number of sub-titles ever used in a seven reel picture. According to Miss Young, the use of titles is rapidly dying out and her greatest ambition is to produce the first real 'silent drama' in which the only wording matter shown on the screen would be the cast of characters.

Officials of the Triangle-Kay-Bee studios have announced that they have acquired the motion picture rights for the production of 'Sudden Jim,' the popular novel that recently created a sensation when published in serial form in the Saturday Evening Post. The star in the Kelland story has not been announced.

Augustus Phillips has joined the forces of the Metro Pictures Corporation and will soon be seen in the support of Viola Dana in the new Metro-Columbia feature, 'The Gates of Eden.'

House Peters, the well known motion picture actress, has been engaged to the actor, Harry Campbell.

SCOTSDALE POLICE SEEK SMOOTH MAN WHO STEALS SUITS

WELL DRESSED; WANTED BEST

When Clerks Leave Him for Moment
He Makes His Getaway; First Entertainment on the Lecture Course is a Big Success; Other News Items.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTSDALE, Nov. 4.—The police are looking for a smooth stranger, good looking and well dressed, who went into one of the leading clothing stores in town and after trying on a number of coats sent the clerk for a pair of suspenders. When the clerk returned the stranger had left the store and two of the very best overcoats in stock were missing. It is thought that while the clerk was getting the suspenders, he threw the overcoats out of the store window and then a accomplice got the overcoats from the outside.

The man went on down Pittsburg street to another men's furnishing store and after asking to see the best suits they had in stock, asked to try the suit on, saying he did not like to buy suits that did not look well. Thinking he had a very fastidious customer, the proprietor waited on the man, but finally got busy with other customers, and when he went to look after the man who had tried the suit on, found that he had left the store and was then informed that the man had put his old suit on over the top of the new suit and left the store.

OLD FOLKS NEED "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER, BOWELS

Salts, Calomel, Pills Act on Bowels Like Pepper
Acts in Nostrils.

Enjoy life! Don't stay illious, sick, headachy and constipated.

Get a ten-cent box now. Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles. So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only tonic in Cascarets, and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.—Adv.

The story deals with a white girl and finally rescues the girl and her many white savior from death in a snow trail by tragic self-sacrifice. The girl and her lover faced death and starvation when Joe Elk suddenly appeared and took command of the situation. Followed many days of privation and untold suffering while the three walked many miles across the frozen lands of the north. Unknown to the others Joe Elk saved his own meager food supply for them. When all three faced death he forced his food on the man and girl, sending them on while he remained to meet his Maker. The girl and man were saved and Joe Elk, though he died, was the Dawn Maker for the tribe, for the ideals for which he had readily died were eventually carried out by the whites whose devoted admirer he had been. CONNELLSVILLE, PA.

BY ROBERT AMES BENNETT

"Mebbe, and mebbe them breed girls wasn't a tenth as good looking as Marie. She's a lady!"

Vandervyn's lip curled. "If you must have the girl, Jake—how about yourself? Do you think an officer son-in-law would care to have you visiting him at an army post?"

Dupont scowled. "Well, there ain't been no harm done, and you're back now."

"Quite true. But his attentions have put Marie on her high horse. I wish you to take a stand against him and back me up with her."

"You sure can count me in on that, Mr. Van," eagerly assented Dupont.

"All right. I've got him fixed. But I wanted to make sure of your backing. If he comes to dinner tonight I'll have a gay little surprise or two up my sleeve for him."

"I been waiting to ask you about the same. How're we going to work the deal?"

"We've got to make a show of a real contest. It's to be run on the old-style rump plan."

"Suppose one of them there men at the butte has the best horse?"

Vandervyn thrust out his jaw. "Don't rush yourself. I'm going to have that mine. This is my idea of the way we'll fix it. He leaned over and murmured in Dupont's ear.

The trader shook his head. "Um-m! I'm not saying that mightn't work. Just the same, though, it'd make you the only one what could do the entering. I'd be a sooner."

"The mine would be entered by me, but of course we would have the understanding that you were to get your half," replied Vandervyn. He stepped briskly to the door. "Come, I guess the bunch has had time enough to cool their heels."

Still frowning dubiously, Dupont followed him over to the office, where Hardy and the commissioners sat waiting for them, stiff and constrained.

Hardy at once addressed Vandervyn: "Be so kind as to open the safe and lay before these commissioners every public paper in the office. They decline to show me their authority for an inspection of my accounts. Therefore I have declined to make an official presentation to them of agency affairs. There is nothing to conceal from any inquirer. You may have every document to these persons—in my presence."

Vandervyn nonchalantly shrugged, and went over to open the safe. One of the commissioners remarked in an officious tone: "Where is the issue clerk? He ought to be present to examine his accounts."

"That's Charlie Redbear, gentlemen—the interpreter," explained Dupont. "He'll take out the papers, down the creek to his house, when we've a session. Want me to send for him? You'll need him to make your official talk to the chiefs."

"You will do us well for that, Jake," interposed Vandervyn. "Besides, I believe the commissioners will wish to put off the powwow until tomorrow. It's a tremendous trip across from the railroad. No doubt they will glance through the agency papers, and then go over to your house to plan the opening of the mineral lands."

The big, black-eyed man who had ridden in the front seat of the car, nodded and replied in an oily tone: "If you assure us the accounts are correct, Mr. Vandervyn, I think it is needless trouble at this time to make further investigation."

"Still, oughtn't we to—" One of the commissioners began a question, but he was interrupted by a question of leave the office, and he went to the will of the majority.

Hardy bowed them out with punctilious courtesy. He was still working when Marie's Indian boy brought word that she wished him to come to dinner without fail. He hesitated, but at last sent back the reply that he would be present.

Having in mind the cold and almost insulting manner of the visitors, he cut his arrival as close as possible. This proved to be a tactical move. Though the newcomers were all mellow with whisky, a chilling silence followed the entrance of the acting agent. Even Dupont turned his thick shoulder and poured himself another drink without a word of greeting.

Only Vandervyn raised his empty glass to the last guest, and called ironically: "Just in time, captain. Here's to your quick progress along the course of your career."

Hardy did not reply. He was bowing to Marie, who had that moment appeared in the dining room doorway.

"Dinner is served, gentlemen," she said, and she bowed in her most graceful manner. "Captain Hardy, you may take me to."

Vandervyn sprang up, angry-eyed. Marie did not seem to perceive him. She stepped in beside Hardy, and while with perfect composure while the other guests passed out after her father. Vandervyn's face was far from pleasant as he followed the others. The girl did not look at him. Hardy escorted her to the head of the most distant kitchen gentleman present. Vandervyn alone was fully aware of the motives that had prompted Marie to heed his rival. He bent over his plate, his lip between his teeth. For a time he could neither eat nor talk. Then he rallied round, for a while, and started in the bubbling amber of his champagne, his lips curled in an odd smile. At last a merry quip from Marie stirred him to action. He rose and bowed to her.

"Lady—and gentlemen," he smilingly remarked, "I have two very pleas-not little announcements to make. It is my fond expectation that you will relish them quite as much as you have relished this delicious little dinner."

He looked at Marie, smiled, and continued:

"My first announcement relates to our martial fellow-guest, the gallant and distinguished Captain Floyd Hardy. The privilege and pleasure are mine to inform the distinguished officer that the war department has been pleased to relieve him of this irksome detail to grant him permission immediately to join his regiment, which is at Vancouver barracks, Washington, under orders to sail for Alaska."

All eyes turned upon Hardy. Some gazed with malice; others were cold. Marie's alone were sympathetic. Hardy glanced around the table with an unperturbed look, and bowed to Vandervyn.

"Pray accept my acknowledgments of the kindness with which you make the announcement," he said, and he turned to smile gravely into Marie's troubled face. "I could have asked for time to carry out our irrigation plans. But, doubtless, the bureau will find some one more competent than myself."

"Will you not remonstrate against this unjust order?" she exclaimed.

"You forget that I am a soldier," he replied. "Army life is a life of service. You will now understand why most army women are army girls before they are army wives."

"Ah—but if a woman loves?" murmured Marie, and her gaze sank with the drooping of her eyelids. "Alaska must be a magnificent land to visit it."

Vandervyn was bending to seat himself. He straightened as if struck. The suddenness of the movement drew all eyes back to him. His wine-flushed face had gone white. He met the wondering look of the man opposite, and forced a smile.

"I have still another announcement to make," he said, "one that you will all admit to be still more pleasant than the delightful news of our gallant friend's summons to visit fields of service. Gentlemen—and lady—permit me to remind you that all the world loves a lover. This being true, it follows that all the world must doubly love a pair of lovers. It is my privilege and delight to be able to announce that as I am not at present free to engage myself, the other member of the pair, our charming hostess, has graciously given her promise to wait for me."

He caught up his champagne glass, which the Indian boy had just refilled. "Gentlemen, here's to the loveliest girl in the world, the lady who has given me her true promise!"

The commissioners rose—Dupont rose. Hardy sat as if stunned, his eyes fixed upon Marie's face in a stricken, half-credulous stare. She was very pale. She seemed to shrink. Yet she made no attempt to deny Vandervyn's statements. Hardy stood up with the other men and, for the first time that evening, he emptied his champagne glass.

"Youth to youth!" he murmured. Meeting Vandervyn's exultant smile, he drew in a deep breath, and his voice rang clear and steady: "You are to be congratulated, sir. I wish you the great good fortune that you may in all things prove worthy of the lady's trust."

Vandervyn's flushed face crimsoned, but whether with shame or anger could not be told. Marie had risen, and her carelessness diverted attention from the rivals.

"The coffee and cigars will be served in the parlor," she announced.

Vandervyn somewhat hastily led the way to the other room. Hardy, being the farthest away, followed behind the others. When he came to the door he coolly closed and bolted it.

"Captain!" breathlessly exclaimed Marie. "What will they think?"

"Most of them are beyond thinking, and they have the whisky bottle," he replied. He faced about, and came back to her.

She shrunk before the look in his eyes.

"You—you have no right!" she murmured. "I will go—"

"Not until you have heard me. There may be no other opportunity for me to see you alone before I go away," he said. "I do not wish to reproach you. But you must realize that your failure to tell me of your promise to him led me to believe I had a fighting chance."

"You do not—ask me to explain," she faltered.

"What is there to explain?" he rejoined. "You knew that I trusted your sincerity utterly, and you were willing to amuse yourself with me while he was away."

"If you have no right," she sought to defend herself. "I never led you to believe—"

"You told me nothing of that promise to him. I thought you—what you knew I thought you; and all these weeks, every day—how can a woman look so beautiful—seem so true and loving in every word and act—and toy with the deepest feelings of a man as you have amused yourself with mine? No, do not attempt to deny the facts, please. It will only add to the bitterness. I am trying to keep from saying harsher things. I cannot hide the fact that you have struck me a severe blow. It would be easier if you had not insisted upon my coming here tonight to be made the butt of his mockery."

Marie threw up her head, her eyes blazing with indignant scorn.

"You can believe that of me? I thought you a gentleman!" Her voice lowered. "You have been served as you deserve. And now I am glad—"

He turned about and went out through the parlor. The other men were clanking glasses in "Jolly good-bye."

CHAPTER XIX.

In Self-Defense.

Rather early the next morning the big, red-faced, blue-eyed man came alone to the office. He found Hardy making out a final report as acting agent.

"Getting ready to turn over?" he asked.

"I am prepared to do so the moment the new agent arrives and has checked the lists of agency property," was Hardy's curt reply.

"All right. I'll O. K. your report. Don't need to check the lists of an officer and gentleman," the man mused in his official tone. He handed over a packet. "Here are the papers relieving you, and my appointment. I'm the new agent. I held them back to give you young Vandervyn the chance to spring his pleasant little surprises on you."

"I'm the New Agent."

"Very considerate," said Hardy. He opened and read the official document with care, pocketed his own, and handed the other back to the new agent.

"Very good. Now, if you will examine the accounts of the chief clerk and the issue clerk. I have brought them down to date, together with my report."

The new agent glanced at the papers and took up a pen. "You've certified their correctness. That's enough for me. I'll give you my O. K. of the turnover."

"You would oblige me by checking the property in the warehouse."

"Waste of time, captain. You'll want to be starting for the railroad. We made a night of it. Commissioners' heads are sore this morning. They want to get to work, and this is the best place. I can loan you my touring-car to take you over to the railroad."

"Thank you. I prefer to ride my mare," said Hardy. "I shall ask you, however, to send one of the police with my trunk in Dupont's buckboard."

"I'll send it in the motor. There's a lot more of our own baggage to be brought out from the railroad," insisted the new agent.

He inspected Hardy's papers, and went to hunt up the chauffeur of the second car. Hardy took his private papers and the reports that he wished to mail, and went over to his quarters to pack his baggage. Dupont sent a policeman to fetch Hardy's mare and came in to offer his services.

"I hope you ain't going off with no hard feelings, Cap," he said.

Hardy gravely shook hands with him.

"None, this morning," he assured. "A man cannot afford to cherish enmity. I shall ask you to go with me to the depot of the head chief."

Dupont hesitated, and ended by complying with the request. They found old Ti-ova-konza seated in his robes, waiting for the white chiefs to call a council. When, with Dupont's aid, Hardy explained that the must go away, the noble old chief's stolidity fell from him like a mask, and he began to cry out in impassioned speech against the departure of the tribe's true friend. Hardy could only express his deep regret, and repeat that he had to obey the orders of his own head chief. When he had explained the reason for his departure, he was waiting for the Indian bureau to be exchanged trifling gifts of friendship with the chief and tore himself away.

The policeman was waiting with the mare. Hardy gave him a coin and swung into the saddle.

"One last word, Dupont," he said. "Kindly tell your daughter what I said about not cherishing enmity."

"How about Mr. Van?" questioned Dupont.

"You need say nothing to him from me. But—" Hardy bent over in the saddle to bring his stern face to the trader's—"advise you to watch that young man. He's a snake."

Dupont stood for some time staring after the officer. When he started for his store, before which a crowd of Indians were waiting, his shrewd eyes were narrow with calculation, and his rubby forehead was rubbing the grizzled hair under the brim of his hat.

Hardy permitted the mare to choose her own pace.

As he neared the foot of the valley he saw Redbear and Olna riding up the creek from the road crossing. The girl dropped in her saddle as if ill. A nearer view confirmed his suspicions. Redbear was intoxicated, and he was abusing his sister in the foulest of language. When Hardy approached, the girl averted her shame-red face, and dropped still lower over her pony's withers. Redbear leaped instantly at the intruder and burst into a drunken laugh. Though his body was reeling, he had almost perfect control of his tongue.

"Look at him, Weena!—here!" Here followed a number of obscene epithets. "That man of yours lost no time. The tin soldier is on the run. 'Told you we had fixed him.'"

"You drunken dog!" said Hardy. "Keep quiet and go home."

"Who's going to make me?" challenged the halfbreed, his bloodshot eyes flashing with vicious anger. "I don't take any more orders from you. You'd try to put the killing of Nogen on me—try to make out it was me shot him, and tried to shoot you those two times!—But Van fixed you. He promised to keep you from putting me in jail. That's why I let him have Weena when we went into the mountains."

"You cur!" cried Hardy. "So you permitted him?"

Olna threw up her head with the courage of outraged innocence.

"Why should he stop him from taking me?" she shrilled. "I am only a breed girl, but my man loves me, me only! I had a right to be his wife if I wanted to."

"His wife?" incredulously exclaimed Hardy. "A man of his stamp never could have married you."

"He did! he did!" insisted Olna. "I thought you too kind to think I would be a bad girl. He married me by tribal custom and the common-law way of white people."

Hardy's sharp gaze softened with pity. "Guns, you innocent! Tribal custom is not binding on a white man."

"But common-law marriage!" triumphantly rejoined the girl in the faith of her unquestioning love. "He said white people often get married that way."

Hardy burst out between pity and indignation: "The scoundrel!—You poor child! Common-law marriage is only half-marriage at best. To make it even that much of a tie, it is necessary that a man and woman should live together as husband and wife openly. He kept this matter secret, he persuaded you and your brother to tell no one—the scoundrel!"

Stricken with grief and shame, Olna uttered a moan and crouched down over her pony's withers, with her face in her hands. But the drink-crazed head of Redbear scowled only that Hardy was berating his sister's husband. He made an effort to straighten in the saddle, and his right hand fumbled eagerly for the hilt of his revolver. Hardy swore his mare alongside and reached out. Redbear slumped from his saddle like a sack of grain.

Olna slipped down to run to her brother. But Hardy was quicker. He threw himself on the half-dazed drunkard. A skillful wrench loosened the stubborn clutch of the other's fingers on the gun. Disarmed and perhaps partly sobered by the shock, Redbear stretched out on the dusty soil.

"Oh, he is hurt!" gasped Olna.

Hardy rolled the drunkard away from her and spoke sternly: "He is not hurt. Redbear, stand up!"

Redbear gathered himself together, and, led by Olna, staggered to his feet. The ponies had cantered away. Hardy led his mare around beside Redbear, and he and Olna, between them, managed to lift the almost helpless man into the saddle. While they were going the half-mile to the cabin, Hardy led the mare, and Olna walked beside her. Olna's steady hand in his seat. Neither saw the rider who rode up out of the creek bed beyond the cabin and wheeled from view behind the end wall.

When they reached the house, Hardy helped Redbear dismount before the door and handed him the bottle of whisky. He then lifted his hat to Olna with utmost respectfulness.

"Miss Redbear," he said, "you have been wronged in a most despicable manner. He has lied to you. Go back into the mountains with your grandfather. I believe the racial will soon leave the reservation, and then you will be free from him."

"Thanks for the prophecy, captain," came a jeer from the end of the cabin. They stared about, and saw Vandervyn standing at the corner, his face set in a cynical smile.

"So you've quit soldiering and taken to preaching?" he sneered.

"O-o-oh!" sighed Olna, and she crept toward the mocker, her hands imploringly outstretched, her soft eyes blurring over with tears of pitiful entreaty. "Tell him—tell him it isn't true! Tell him our marriage is a real marriage!"

"What a dose over a little thing like that!" he sniggered.

The girl cringed back, and sank down, in silent anguish to hide her face.

"For shame, sir!" cried Hardy. "Have you no shred of decency?"

Vandervyn laughed. Redbear started staggering toward him, the empty revolver concealed behind his back with drunken musing.

"You think it's funny," he muttered. "You own up that marriage with her wasn't real like you said it was."

"What if it wasn't?" bawled Vandervyn. "It was good enough for a halfbreed scum." He snarled at Hardy. "You good enough for any halfbreed or quarterbreed?"

Hardy tensed, yet instantly checked the wrath that would have impelled him to hurl himself at the throat of the mocker. Redbear lashed back from self-mastery, and flung had nerved his sense of subservience to Vandervyn. At Marie's glance his fury burst out.

"You liar! You thief!" he yelled. "Show me mine! You promised! I'll show you. You—Cursing wildly, he flourished his revolver, and brought it down in a wavering attempt to take him.

"Stop! Stop!" Hardy cried to Vandervyn. "It's not loaded! Stop!"

But Vandervyn had already whipped out his revolver. From the muzzle leaped a sheet of flame. Redbear flung up his arms and pitched backward. Swiftness Vandervyn recoiled his revolver and aimed it at Hardy.

"Put up your hands! Keep them away from your coat!" he shouted in fierce menace.

Hardy did not put up his hands. He bent down to feel the heart of the halfbreed. Shrieking with horror, Olna fell fainting across the body of her brother. Hardy looked up, grim and quiet.

"I hope you are satisfied," he said. "You have killed him."

Vandervyn kept his revolver pointed at Hardy.

"I shot in self-defense," he snarled. "Don't you make a move. He had his gun on me."

"It was empty. I called to you."

"You didn't—no! I had fired. I shot him down to save my life. I shot you, too, if you try to draw."

"Get out of here!" ordered Hardy, heedless of the threat. "You've caused trouble enough. Send the new agent. You can tell him that I admit you seem to have been justified."

Vandervyn's menacing attitude relaxed. He half lowered his revolver, but kept a wary watch on Hardy as he backed away around the corner of the cabin and ran to jump on his pony and gallop away. Hardy had sprung up. But it was only to hasten into the house for water. He came out with a half-filled bucket, drew Olna over on her back, and dashed water into her face. She opened her eyes, saw him, and, reddening with shame, turned her face aside. It happened to be toward her brother. Suddenly she drew herself up on her elbow to bend over the gray face.

"He—is not—dead!" she gasped.

Redbear's lips were moving. Hardy bent to lift him up to a half-sitting position. He knew by grim experience that with such a wound there was no hope, but he also knew that it would ease the agony to raise the injured man. Olna dampened her brother's forehead. He muttered a curse.

"Get out! Get out!" warned Hardy. "You have only a few minutes."

Redbear seemingly did not hear him. He repeated the curse: "The—I'd 'a' got him—way I got Nogen—if you hadn't unloaded—my gun."

"You shot Nogen?" queried Hardy. "Speak out! You say you shot Nogen?"

"He—wanted her—Marie—same way as Van—same way as—Van said you—wanted her. We—tried to get you—twice—because he, Van, told me you wanted Marie—that way. The liar—the Ab-r-r-h!"

From between the lips that had parted to utter the curse there gushed a scented stream.

Hardy laid the body on the ground and drew the distracted girl away by main force.

"Come into the house," he ordered. "You must not look at him."

She offered only passive resistance. When he put her in a chair, she sat motionless, as if dazed, her dry eyes fixed on vacancy.

"This won't do," he said. "You must go to your grandfather. I cannot take you with me, and besides—"

He checked himself, caught up a blanket, and went outdoors. When presently he returned, she had not moved. He fumbled her scant wardrobe and few trinkets in a blanket roll, and led her out around the house, carefully keeping himself between her and the blanket-covered form on the ground near the door. He had brought her own and her brother's ponies to the back of the house. He lashed the handle on the dead man's saddle, lifted the girl upon her pony, and mounted his mare.

Half-way to the agency they met Ti-ova-konza coming down with several members of his family to visit his half-breed grandchildren. Urged by Hardy, the girl broke through their silence to tell the old chief what had happened. Before she had finished she was weeping in the arms of her grandfather.

Notwithstanding the delay, Hardy again permitted the mare to choose her own pace. Though she went at a snail's trot, a messenger in the remaining automobile could have overtaken him at any time before dark. But no messenger was sent.

Midnight came. Hardy met the car that had taken his baggage to town. It was piled high with the baggage of the new agent and the commissioners. The chauffeur, with the indifference of a city man, whirled past him without so much as slackening speed.

CHAPTER XX.

The Registration.

At noon the following day the commissioners came out with the baggage, and announced the conditions of the land opening. All entrants were to start from the cottee at a given signal, to be made at ten o'clock in the morning of the second day following. Any person who started before the signal would be disqualified.

A tent was set up for the commissioners in the center bottom, on the reservation side of the divided stream, and the chairman and secretary proceeded to take the signatures, thumb prints and descriptions of the waiting colony of prospectors and cowboys.

Since Hardy and Marie had first come upon the camp, the number of men had twice doubled. Yet, owing to the obscure manner in which the proposed opening had been advertised, there were absurdly few of them, all told, compared to the multitudes at other governmental land openings. Perhaps with a view toward covering this deficiency, the commissioners had ordered full descriptions of every contestant, and so managed to cover many sheets of paper and to consume much time.

The recording was well under way when Vandervyn and Dupont came down to the camp. Neither made any attempt to push into the line of entrants. But Dupont read the posted notice of the conditions of the contest, frowned, and remarked to Vandervyn that he wished to show him something over at the butte. "The young man looked bored, yet borrowed a pony, and rode across with him to the deserted camp."

"What is it?" he asked. "Have you found a more direct trail to hatching it?"

AUTOMOBILE RACES IN UNIONTOWN ON THANKSGIVING DAY

New Speedway There Will be Formally Opened With a Big Meet.

MANY ENTRIES ARE RECEIVED

Famous Drivers Expected to Participate; One Race Will be Restricted to Cars Regularly Sold by Automobile Dealers; Neil Whalen Director.

Another link in the circuit of automobile speed courses will be made on Thanksgiving Day, November 30, with the inaugural race on a speedway that is rapidly being completed at Uniontown. While the Pennsylvania course is being opened too late to be included in the American Automobile Association championship award events of 1916, it is scheduled to play a prominent part in the leading motor races of the future. As it is, the Thanksgiving Day contest will furnish one of the most interesting sporting events of the year, the entries secured to date by Neil Whalen, director of contests, being of a high calibre. A number of cars and drivers that competed in the recent record breaking race at Shippensburg have already been entered for the main event of the Uniontown meet.

An innovation for speedway competition that will have a decided appeal to the motor enthusiast will be a race restricted to cars that are regularly sold by the automobile dealers with establishments within 150 miles of Uniontown. These cars are also to carry drivers and mechanics coming within this resident qualification. While speedway contests of the last two years have furnished remarkable speed performances, the machines used are in most cases specially built for racing purposes and cannot be purchased in the open market. For this reason there is no direct interest taken in the events by the hundreds of thousands of automobile owners, aside from the desire to see the marvels of automobile construction annihilate distance.

The Uniontown speedway is of the board type of construction, similar in principle to the courses at New York and Chicago upon which all world's speedway records have been shattered. It is a 1 1/2 mile oval designed to permit the racing of cars at maximum speed with a minimum of danger. Jack Prince, known throughout the country as a builder of speed bowls and constructor of more speedways than any other man in the country, is supervising the building of the Uniontown track and has an army of men working at work rushing the board course to completion. An idea of the task represented in this work will be gained when it is known that in the construction of the track alone more than 2,500,000 feet of lumber will be used.

The Uniontown speedway is the result of a desire on the part of C. W. Johnson, one of the Uniontown automobile dealers, to provide a modern automobile racing course for the thousands of speed enthusiasts in Western Pennsylvania. Mr. Johnson created a spirit of enthusiasm in the project among other automobile dealers of Uniontown with the result that the speedway is now being deemed as a municipal feature, all of Uniontown and the surrounding country taking a keen interest in the construction of the track, which will place Western Pennsylvania more conspicuously on the motor map.

While the entries are not closed until midnight, November 25, Neil Whalen, the racing driver, who is acting as director of the contests, has already secured a representative list of entries and has prospects of lining up many other racing stars in the limited field of 15 starters. Entry blanks have been signed by Billy Chandler, Arthur Klein and Barney Newgard, all to drive Crawford cars; Hugh Hughes, who will handle the Huskins Special; George Buzane and Charlie Devlin as pilots of Duesenberg cars, and Jim Benedict, who will drive a car known as the Blue Bird. In addition to these actual entries, Whalen believes that Frank Galvin and Dave Lewis will be present behind the wheels of Promotor cars, as part of the Indianapolis Speedway team; McBride and Watson will handle two Chrysler two Delages will be entered from the Harry S. Harkness Sheephead Day team; a W. H. P. will be handled by a driver whose name he does not wish to make public at this time, and a Clio car will be driven by a prominent pilot.

The main event of the Uniontown program will be a race for non-stock cars of 300 cubic inches piston displacement or under, over a distance of 112 1/2 miles, or 100 laps of the course, with prizes aggregating $3,000 being split between the first five drivers to finish. The race for cars entered by the dealers will be 54 miles and will be for $1,150 in prizes. Of this money $100 will be awarded to the driver leading at the end of 45 laps in the big event and $50 each to the drivers in front at the end of the 16th and 32nd laps in the dealers' races. In addition to these races there will be a special exhibition time trial for the purpose of setting new American speedway records for 1, 5 and 10 miles.
